Buenos Aires, on the banks of the Rio de la Plata is a global, open hearted metropolis, a place where tango, literature, good food, shopping, music, films, theatre, football and nightlife converge. A concoction of European-style appeal and Latin feeling, the Queen of the Rio de la Plata has everything to offer the tourist. You can learn how to tango, which, developed by immigrants over a century ago, is the purest expression of the melancholy felt by these people as they lived in the shadows of the ships that had brought them from Europe. You can also enjoy the amazing culture on offer in its museums, excellent theatres, public parks, exhibition centres and historical neighbourhoods. Like most capital cities the shopping experience is a must, booming local fashions and designs mingle with antiques or avant-garde objects, period and fashionable furniture, handicrafts and works by creative young artists. Though meat-based dishes are the soul of Argentine cuisine, many others are influenced by Spanish, Italian, Jewish, Oriental and other ethnics groups. Buenos Aires, a Latin city after all, where the pleasure of enjoying a good meal or musical show can be as unforgettable as attending a football match, a sport so close to Argentine hearts that could be considered one of the fine arts.
